

Early Journal Content on JSTOR, Free to Anyone in the World

This article is one of nearly 500,000 scholarly works digitized and made freely available to everyone in the world by JSTOR.

Known as the Early Journal Content, this set of works include research articles, news, letters, and other writings published in more than 200 of the oldest leading academic journals. The works date from the mid-seventeenth to the early twentieth centuries.

We encourage people to read and share the Early Journal Content openly and to tell others that this resource exists. People may post this content online or redistribute in any way for non-commercial purposes.

THE TEACHING OF MATHEMATICS TO STUDENTS OF ENGINEERING<sup>1</sup>

FROM THE STANDPOINT OF THE PRACTISING ENGINEER

I am honored by being asked to say a few words to you about the results of my experience as to the needs of the teaching of mathematics to students of engineering from the point of view of a practical engineer. I have had the good fortune of receiving quite a thorough mathematical training in the École des Ponts et Chaussées of France, and I have also had the good fortune of developing into a fairly practical engineer; my remarks will therefore be backed by actual experience.

Mathematics is to an engineer what anatomy is to a surgeon, what chemistry is to an apothecary, what the drill is to an army officer. It is indispensable. I think we all agree on this point.

There is a considerable agitation at this time in France and Germany, especially the former, favoring the limitation of the
